Measure, Appointment or Topic: SB809

My name is Geoff Scott and I own and operate Marion Acres, and Helvetia Poultry Processing. A small farm and an Oregon Department of Agriculture inspected poultry processing facility. I am writing today in support of SB 809 and urge you to vote yes on this crucial piece of legislation.

Our livestock producers have been facing a steep problem here in Oregon. Meat processing bottlenecks have been a problem in Oregon and across the country for decades and processing remains one of the most consolidated industries in the country. According to the Open Markets Institutes recent study, more than half of the poultry processing capacity in the country is controlled by just 4 companies (Tyson, JBS, Perdue, and Sanderson) and according to the National Chicken Council in 2019, 9 out of 10 chickens raised in the US are raised in a contract farming system. All this comes together to place an economic incentive on processors to work with these large companies instead of independent growers not funnelling their product into aggregated supply chains. This has led to reports of 12 month wait times for processing dates from our farmers, termination of small farm relationships with larger plants, and lost sales and delayed growth for our small farms. The demand is there, but we need more legal pathways for our farmers to get their chickens to market.

This is where the State Meat inspection Program and the expansion in SB 809 come in. The State Meat Inspection program allows farms like mine more choices in processing, and all meat processed in these facilities must be sold within Oregon. This creates an incentive for businesses to work with local, independent producers and create better supply chains for our community food systems. It also provides more flexibility than the current ODA poultry inspection and allows for more farm businesses to scale up and enter new markets.

I urge you to support SB-809 so that Oregonians can feed Oregonians.
