Measure, Appointment or Topic: SB726

It is essential that emissions of methane and other noxious chemicals be monitored at the landfills our cities, counties and state use in order to see if the methods to prevent their emissions are working, to protect the health of our residents and to mitigate further climate change. Public knowledge of the ongoing emissions and their dangers are also necessary for our populace to understand we must curb production of solid waste to our landfills by improving our habits, including food waste, learning to compost properly where we live, and reducing consumption and its related disposal within our powers.
