We desperately need an energy storage transition plan. I won't reiterate the dangers emanating from outdated storage tanks, seismic risks, air pollution, the vast majority of airplane fuel and other fossil fuels being stored within Portland city limits and just across from Forest Park, etc. These are well known. We need a comprehensive plan that includes benchmark goals that can be achieved and will lead to a safer, quicker transition to truly renewable energy sources. We also need to have an inclusive, equitable planning process.
