People are overwhelmingly more inclined to request assisted suicide when they are depressed and/or despondent. This is also all too often a temporary mental/emotional state. Given time, most such sufferers will emerge from these states of dark depression with renewed vigor and gratitude for their life. Granting them means to end their life when their ability to make well reasoned rational decisions is at both precipitate, not in their best interest, irresponsible and poor health care management.

Please vote against assisted suicide!
