What needs to happen is prioritize its spending better. But that is hard work — work politicians don't like to do because they have to tell some people, "No". It is far easier for them to ask you to say, "Yes."

Maybe instead of extending healthcare and food stamps to non-citizens at the tune of $100's of millions each year, the state should use that money to do things the good citizens of this state would like done. The claim that the state needs this new 4% Tire Tax because there is no money available for these purposes is simply not true.
