As things go my husband and I are scraping together the money to put new tires on his car, currently, and it's exceeding what tax returns we got. We both work full time and are having to rely on our tax returns to even afford tires at all. While we could buy the least expensive tires available at about $99/tire, that's not the wisest thing to do for how many miles we would get for the money spent. That cost is before the installation and tire disposal fees. HB 3362 essentially makes getting tires so prohibitive you're going to find people letting their tires get too thin before they can pull together the money to buy new ones, and that's just adding expenses for road damages due to blow outs or potential car accidents. Never mind the potential loss of lives. Please do not approve this bill.
