Why is it that the lower and middle class bears the burden of all these bright ideas for increasing revenues? Most looking for less expensive housing are typically living further away from their job sites or places of employment. A plumber, electrician, any trade person is going to have this weighted burden placed upon this. I grew up in just such a household so know full well the cost not just of transportation but the TIME involved away from family during the work day to get to work. Please stop this poorly conceived proposal.
