Chair Reynolds and Committee Members,

In addition to my oral testimony, I want to illustrate just how easy it remains to purchase vaping products online. This issue is critical for two key reasons:

1. Underage access remains alarmingly simple. Minimal safeguards mean youth can easily obtain these products.
2. The state loses significant tax revenue. When these purchases bypass regulated retailers, the state misses out on essential tax dollars.

While banning flavored tobacco or imposing ultra-high taxes may slightly curb demand, such measures also drive consumers toward unregulated, online, and out-of-state markets. A more restrictive policy risks increasing reliance on these alternative distribution channels rather than effectively reducing use.

I urge you to collaborate with retailers on practical solutions that meaningfully restrict youth access while preserving tax revenue and supporting responsible adult sales.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Respectfully,

Jonathan Polosky
CEO Plaid Pantry

The attached exhibit walks through the purchase of a recent online vape purchase. All I needed was a credit card and to say "yes" I was over 21 years old as I logged into the Vapor Vapes website. There was no age verification, and no signature was required, the product showed up in my mailbox three days after I placed the order.
