No tax on tires. Oregon doesn't have a sales tax and has consistently opposed one. Why introduce one for specific items like tires? Also, can you please share the specific plan, as well as the very specific tactics and processes in support of that plan, of how you will locate tire dust, collect the tire dust. And responsibly dispose of the tire dust? Understanding the plan (which I assume you have already built, otherwise how do you justify its costs to be subsidized by a tax?) could be helpful. But I fear this is another example of a government asking for money without an actual strategy, operational plan, or tactics of how the money will be used.
