Hi, friends.

Thanks for listening. SB78 doesn't make sense. If a home is destroyed, why shouldn't someone be able to build a replacement one of equal or greater size? 2,500 SF is an arbitrary number designed for single-generation homes, but other cultures have multi-generational housing. Why shouldn't parents, children, and grandparents live under the same roof? It makes a lot of sense, especially in rural areas where retirement communities are not readily available. To arbitrarily constrain them to 2,500 square feet does not preserve farmland.
