Corporations after our natural resources in Oregon find well funded clever ways to hide behind either side of the political spectrum - especially when it comes to water, be it Tyson, Nestle and others, and when we make exceptions for Google, Meta etc., these innocently open loopholes for menevolent firms like Nestle and Tyson. During the initiative process it is possible to talk face-toface with people on either side of an issue, about how that particular issue effects them personally - this helps cut through all the bologna false flags on an issue - and helps people make an informed decision on issues unclouded by companies hiding menevolence practices behind political stereotypes in Oregon.

Without this process it would ne nearly impossible to separate the wheat from the chaff - the rice from the husk, with regard to the heart of an issue.
