Many people logically know what is best for them on an issue, but will martyr themselves for ad hoc reasoning based off false flags associated with political affiliation or stereo types.

Talking one-on-one with farmers they will always sign a petition reinforcing the right to water, or an issue that relates to protecting the resources they need to run their family business. But, often politics and political stereotyping has farmers voting against their own self interest - the initiative process allows them the opportunity to voice their truest thoughts without the shackles of cognitive dissonance surrounding political stereotypes.
