After 35+ years practicing primarily family law principally in the tri-county area I know that parenting time is a hot button issue for many couples post-divorce lives. Dad claims he can't see the kids, and Mom claims that the children are mistreated, abused or ignored at dad's home. Having sat as a judge on many of these hearings I can assure you that parenting time is one area where a parent can play "gotcha" with the other parent. Anything to promote the smoothing out of parenting time, particularly in cases of flagrant abuse, would be appropriate and helpful.
