Builders and developers should be held to being responsible for the construction defects. HOA and Condo associations should be given this time to look into construction defects. Some HOA's and Condo developers do not event turn over the association to the owners unit 5-7 years after the start of building date. They are the declarant until then and the sole decision maker for the association. This bill if passed will not give the owners adequate time to preform their due diligence and look into how the building is preforming.
