I believe that analysis of mass shootings over the last twelve or so years will show a large statistical likelihood that a person in possession of a rapid fire gun with a large capacity magazine is going to use it to kill people without any defensive reason other than they "thought those people were bad". Kids get a hold of these guns with an alarming frequency and use them to kill teachers and other kids that they "don't like". The second amendment says a "well-regulated militia". A bunch of individuals who are not officially part of a militia is not a "well-regulated militia" or indeed, a militia at all.
