I don't believe restricting the common wealth with limitations and higher restrictions will not get the crime down to zero. Generally a law abiding citizen stays law abiding the career criminal with no recourse is a big issue. They are the ones offending and repeat offenders. The range of things a person would need to protect themselves from can vary so much that a magazine round limitation could be the difference of seeing their family again or not.

Cops do cop things and separately a person that has a chl protects things immediately to their lives. If you run out of rounds trying to protect yourself from non law abiding people you have no time left to call 911, that's if they even show up. If you have a group of people trying to do harm to you with limited rounds bad things could happen. You need to be able to protect yourself with what ever you're willing to legally carry with you.

I hope this gets looked at with more thought and doesn't get pushed through it will do more damage than good.
