As a proud lifelong, tax-paying, voting Oregon resident, I am uneasy with all of these anti-firearm bills that the Oregon legislature has been busy formulating. I don't understand the urgency of placing additional barriers to a person's constitutional right to keep and bear arms, especially during these troubling times.

When the government itself is trying to actively place limits (and financial burden) on an otherwise law-abiding citizen's ability to purchase, possess, or enjoy a firearm in any of its forms, or with any of its accessories, for any lawful reason, then something distressing is happening to our fragile democracy and I am opposed to such efforts.
