Firearm dealers that reside in this state are already required to hold a Federal Firearms License to conduct business. It seems that the state is wasting money to determine if something is needed that already exists federally, and is required for them to operate selling firearms. In the case it was found the state needs a licensing program, it would create undue financial burden on the small business selling firearms, and create a further limitation of access to Oregonian's Constitutionally protected right to purchase firearms. I oppose this waste of our money and the attempt to thwart access to our Federally protected rights as citizens.
