HB 3626 provides clear, consistent, and sensible rules for micromobility. Clear expectations are an essential part of road safety. By carefully distinguishing the vehicle types that need greater regulation to ensure safety, we help make micromobility solutions more accessible to a wider range of people.

Micromobility devices improve public health by both increasing physical activity at the same time as reducing driving and its negative impact on air quality and road injuries/fatalities. They also provide flexible, independent travel options, especially in regions or at times of day where transit service is infrequent or unavailable.
