Politicians continue to take away firearms from law abiding citizens thinking that this will stop crime, deaths, gun violence, etc, however after substantial loss of Second Amendment rights there has been no change except maybe an increase in gun violence. The best deterrence against gun violence is to have the "victims" with guns, then the criminal knows it is a fair fight and will either back down or not show up at all.

Some politicians like to blame guns for the violence which is completely irresponsible on their part. Blaming a gun for a person's death is no different than blaming a pencil for a student misspelling a word. A human being has to manipulate and inanimate object in order for it to do anything. Gun violence, or any violence for that matter, is created by human beings not guns, humans are the problem not guns.
