While this seems like a good idea I dont think it is The most populous counties would be able to the choose the candidates in the primaries. This forces the rest of the state to choose from those candidates in the November election. Oregon is a blue state so then voters would likely only be able to chose between two democratic candidates in November.

I dont think the people with the highest votes should be allowed to continue, it should be everyone on the ballot so everyone has a fair shot. Some people don't even vote in the primaries or if you are independent or libertarian sometimes you aren't even allowed to vote in primaries or have that option
