The right to clean air and such is an inalienable right and any logical thinker would understand this. When you start wording regulations like this, you are opening the door for the government to tell us how we can implement those rights and taxes and force us to pay fees, fines, etc.

So far some of the non-sensible bureaucracy aimed at giving us a clean environment has just choked out our forests, killed local industries and enriched foreign nations. Pretty sure that incentives for businesses utilizing cleaner practices also works. Most Oregonians would be fine with legislators not making any new laws just to look busy less government is better.
