Chintimini is the only organization that will take in and rehabilitate a lot of wildlife either injured by cars, cats, or just down on their luck.

They take a great number of young birds, mammals and amphibians needing help every spring. Unfortunately wildlife cannot pay for treatment. The reason they end up in the clinic is very often due to human action. It seems only fair that we, as a state, recognize their very important mission and support them. They are operating on a shoestring and could accomplish so much more if they had consistent funding.
