SB210

SB 210 is a classic culture war, solution in search of a problem. Arguments in favor of bills like these always lack evidence of voter fraud, and thinly veil the promotor's true motive of narrowing the voter pool to the privileged few whom have the availability to take time off from work on a random Tuesday, transportation to select few locations and whom don't require the ability to research issues/candidates while voting, choosing instead to simply vote based on the capital letter in parentheses beside their name.

If people were serious about promoting patriotism they would make election day a national holiday.
