The second amendment is quite clear, a citizen may (and should) possess a firearm. Too, a firearm is a tool. Just like any other tool. An ax or a shovel or anything. As any tool it is only as good or as bad as the person wielding it. Plenty of people have died in the past from an ax or shovel. As a tool a firearm is mere property and should have no restrictions placed upon the transfer of a tool outside the federally required strictures of commercially sold tools (firearms). The strictures and mandates are onerous enough already, and again no object on this planet has ever, ever, have done a thing on it's own. People need to be responsible and held accountable, however government over reach is to be condemned. This bill is government over reach.
