Since moving to Oregon, I've thought vote by mail is the greatest thing! No lines, vote in the comfort of your home, drop it off at your convenience. Easy! I've never understood the attacks on it from Republicans and I would likely have not voted and had my voice heard in many more elections if I had to go to the ballot box, stand in line on one specific day to do this. Signatures need to be verified every so often and there is no evidence of fraud or cheating. Present me some data on this argument and my mind may be changed. Changing Oregon's decades old voting method is a dumb idea, will disenfranchise voters, and make it more costly to administer the elections. Thank you.
