I personally believe that this is a terrible idea with incredibly limited or dubious benefits (voting fraud being incredibly uncommon statistically) and so, so many flaws. I work a job with hours that make it much harder to vote in person - what about my disabled friends? What about people who have to be out of the state on business or because of the funeral of a family member? What about people with disabilities or who face logistical or financial issues voting in person? This disenfranchises many people and benefits few, and infringes on our rights as Americans to representation.
