Voting by mail makes for a more educated voter I believe. You have time to read and research AS you vote, you don't have to try and remember who/what you wanted to vote for. You aren't in a hurry to get in and get out so you aren't delaying others, or you are just tired and want to get home to your family. I do not believe there is a problem with voter fraud. Voting in person will discourage those for whom transportation, childcare, or time off work is an issue. I think every county currently allows in-person voting for those who prefer it, I much prefer sitting at my kitchen table with voters manuals, ballot, and a cup of coffee.

Thank you
