I have voted in every election held since 1999. By the time I turned 18, Oregon had already converted fully to vote by mail. I have never voted in person, and I see no GOOD reason to change back to an archaic, outdated system. Our current system works. The infrastructure for the old system hasn't been in place for over 25 years. What's the plan for reinstating it? And for educating the public about it? How much will this cost, and where is that money coming from? What's the point? It's clear Mr Smith is still clinging to some long-disproven conspiracy theories about the "safety and security" of our elections. If he feels so sure the current election system is rigged, how does he explain his own election?
