SB210

Oregon is a case study in how well voting by mail works. It is far easier than voting in person and you're able to research candidates and read up on ballot measures at your leisure. You can vote at your own pace. The opposition would like us to believe that voting by mail increases fraud, but Oregon has nearly two decades of data that proves otherwise. In a time when our rights are being undermined in every facet of life, to lose vote-by-mail would be a slap in the face. If you want to make changes, how about making vote-by-mail available to every state in the country?
