I support Oregon's mail-in voting system because it demonstrably increases voter access and strengthens our democratic process. Mail-in ballots provide greater convenience, allowing individuals to vote from the comfort of their homes, at their own pace, and on their own time. This is especially important for individuals with disabilities, those with demanding work schedules, and those living in rural areas far from polling places. By removing barriers to participation, mail-in voting ensures that more voices are heard, leading to a more representative and robust democracy.
