I love mail in voting and I vote in every election. I pay attention to the issues and the candidates. I spend at least an hour with most ballots, using the voter information pamphlet and notes I have taken, to carefully make the most informed decision possible. I doubt that I would be allowed such a luxury, if in person voting is mandated. Even if it were, I would feel compelled to hurry to allow others to vote, increasing the likelihood of making errors. Also, this seems that it might be intended to be in support of the poorly written and prejudicial federal SAVE act. An act that I as widowed older woman strongly disapprove of as it would effectively bar many if not most, married women from voting.
