Vote by mail allows all voters access to the right to vote. There are no lines, limited times, or geographical challenges to voters. Even if you don't want to mail your ballot back there are ballot boxes for dropping off. I have worked on an election board. Ballots arriving at county voting centers over a generous period of time. They are checked for signatures, protected, and checked by 2 people from different political parties to make sure they are readable. All along the way safeguards are part of the process to make sure the vote is fairly counted.
