Mail in voting is a great benefit to working families who cannot leave work to vote in person. A working person would face hardship and long lines if trying to do it after work, perhaps with cranky and hungry children in tow. I appreciate the security provided with our mail in vote and the ability to take time with my voter pamphlet to make a good decision. I also trust my paper vote much more than a computerized system that can be hacked. I really appreciate being able to see that my vote was received and counted. This does not happen when voting by computer. I see other states with lines many hours long and sometimes far away making voting more difficult for elderly or disabled or people who do not own a car. I think everyone legal should vote and Election Day should be a holiday
