I strongly oppose the proposal to end Vote by Mail. We already have an incredibly secure, efficient, and financially sustainable system for voting in Oregon. Voting in person would make it extremely difficult for hundreds of thousands of Oregonians to have their vote counted, especially those in rural areas of our state, and those who work on election day, and those with disabilities, and those who lack transportation.

Has anyone done the math to determine how much this would cost, to set up so many polling booths? Or is the idea to have a limited number of polling stations, making it more difficult for people to cast their vote? There is no reason for this. We already have safe and secure elections in Oregon. If it ain't broke don't try to fix it.
