I support mail-in voting because it ensures greater accessibility and convenience for a wide range of voters. Not everyone can attend in-person voting on Election Day due to reasons like illness, travel, work commitments, or disabilities. Mail-in voting provides an opportunity for these individuals to participate in the democratic process, ensuring that all voices are heard. Additionally, it helps reduce long wait times and congestion at polling stations, making the voting experience more efficient and inclusive. I myself always vote as early as I can and I drop my ballot off at a dropbox. It's a simple process and I barely even have to get out of the car to do so. Someone not able bodied would easily do that vs having to go somewhere on a specific time and day to vote.
