With the current mail-in system, Oregon enjoys: more informed voting, as voters have time to sit down with informational resources and decide their votes; higher turnout, as people are able to vote at their convenience and in comfort, without waiting in lines all day, dehydrated and fatigued; confidence in the correctness of the counted vote, free from computer glitches, software bugs, vulnerability to hacking, or other failure as is all too frequently reported for voting machines; an authentic paper record beginning with the actual physical ballot direct from the voter's hands that can be authoritatively re-counted at need; and identity verification in the form of signature matching, which yes, really is checked. We have effectively NO fraud and far superior representation of ALL the population of the state, urban and rural alike, BECAUSE OF mail-in voting. Going backward on this now will not benefit our state in any respect!
