

Submitter:

Michael Cottam

On Behalf Of:

Committee:

Senate Committee On Rules

Measure, Appointment or Topic:

SB210

Not only is mail-in voting extremely secure, but it's also a big benefit to employers, and the self-employed, because when a voter chooses the mail-in option, it means they don't have to take time off work to vote. For the employer, this means more productive hours that month; for the self-employed like myself, I get another billable hour or two of time that I'll get paid for at the end of the month.

As well, the inconvenience of in-person voting undoubtedly results in many people not voting, where they would have if they could vote by mail.