I believe voting should happen on one day with a strict voter ID requirement. Limiting voting to a single day ensures a focused, unified process that's easier to monitor and secure. Pair that with voter ID, and you've got a system that guarantees every vote is valid—something as simple as showing an ID, which we already do for banking or driving, protects the integrity of our elections. None of this stretched-out mail-in nonsense or insecure machines that can be hacked. I've heard about dead voters on rolls and ballots gone missing—enough's enough. One day, in-person, with ID is the way to go. It's fair, it's secure, and it keeps our democracy strong
