I oppose changing the vote by mail system in Oregon to an in-person voting system as the standard method for conducting an election. Voting by mail is convenient and increases the voter turnout by making voting accessible to all regardless of inhibiting factors. Voting by mail puts everyone on an even level with the ease and comfort of filling out the ballot in one's own home and is not affected by time constraints and accessibility issues like work hours and physical location and ease to access a polling place. Oregon's mail-in voting system is a positive example of egalitarian governing.
