The proposal to end mail-in voting is a blatant attempt to corrupt Oregon's voting and disenfranchise the most vulnerable of our population. Mail-in voting has worked for decades and there is no evidence of any kind of voter fraud. Changing the system as it now stands would cost money, create confusion, and make it more difficult for people to vote. Oregon has a chance to continue to be a state that stands up for its citizens and protects their access to fair elections, changing our process would undermine that.
