I am writing to say that I oppose making in person voting the standard method for conducting an election. Much of Oregon is rural communities with some people living miles out of town and from the nearest voting sites, this would make it harder on them to vote if not impossible in some cases. Also, it is disrupting to people's work and family lives to be able to take time to possibly stand for hours in a line. Plus, this feels like another way that the current administration is trying to chip away at our democracy and at the power of the people.
