The people of Oregon need to have confidence in their elections. When you send out ballots to people's homes, and everyone knows that in many cases, one person gets the ballots and then votes for everyone, it doesn't give you confidence at that the people's will has really been Accomplished. Mailing ballots is just a very easy way to defraud the elections. I've lived in Oregon 72 years so I have been involved in elections both ways and in person voting gave me a much more confident in the integrity of the process. If people can't come in personally to vote, then there should be some way that they can apply to get their ballot sent to them in the mail. That's not hard to do. Please let us go back to a method that we can all have considerable more confidence in. Thank you. Richard Heard
