I oppose this legislation. This would negatively impact a broad spectrum of Oregonians who rely on the ease of use of mail-in voting. Marginalized and underserved communities would also see their voting turnout numbers decrease with a change to in-person voting without very deep supports to continue their current levels of voting engagement. For these reasons, I do not believe this legislation is positively progressive toward the needs of the average Oregonian or in alignment with the policies we would like to see implemented by our legislature.
