

Submitter:

Darren Reed

On Behalf Of:

Committee:

Senate Committee On Rules

Measure, Appointment or Topic:

SB210

I've lived in and voted in several states with different voting practices, and by far our current system of mail in voting is the best I've experienced. There is absolutely no evidence to suggest that forcing in person voting will do anything to improve the voting process, and there is all the evidence in the world that it will instead suppress voter turnout. There are plenty of Oregonians, including my wife, who have mobility issues that sometimes prevent them from leaving the house. I'm so sick of this obviously partisan bull coming from regressive factions within our government. You want to hold an elected office, fine; but work for the good of ALL your constituents, not just the ones you think will line your pocketbook.