SB210

Limiting access to democracy via the requirement for in-person voting is archaic and not only gender-based oppression, but also race-based oppression and socioeconomic oppression. The people should have every access to voting. There should be no limitations to accessing the right to vote and participating in making this nation a greater a place. Requiring people to vote in person will create an undue burden on our most vulnerable population. The people who this democracy purports to serve the most.
