The ability to vote by mail allows for a larger number of voters to participate in the democratic process. There are no unnecessary challenges to deal with, such as requesting time off work, finding transportation, or lining up childcare. People with disabilities or health challenges, or those who are elderly, don't have to wait in long lines. And the ability to read, review, and study up on the issues and candidates on one's own time is invaluable.

Oregon has one of the best voting systems in the country, and I oppose moving away from that.
