Voting by mail gets Oregon the most representative voting results compared to requiring in-person voting. Requiring in-person voting makes it much harder for working-class people to exercise their right to vote. Voting from home, where citizens can research their options when it is convenient for them and mark their votes directly is patently superior to having to research ahead of time, bring your notes with you, and then fill in bubbles separately in a little booth where your time may be limited by the amount of free time you have on election day.
