I am ok with in person or mail in ballots . Now with my self being in a chair mail in would be easier for my self and others with similar situations or live way out of town However I think all mail in ballots need another layer of security to the ballots themselves
Each ballot should have a thumb print and a signature on them and if either has been ran twice then that ballot doesn't count at them . But there must be proof it was not ran because a worker doesn't like whom is on the ballot to vote for. I also believe all secured drop off points be secured so ballots are not tampered with or can be damaged with some sort of acway for the deposit box is opened up . Maybe by a card with a chip or security code or whatever but I think a thumb print and the drop box under a 24 hr camera would do very well
