I strongly oppose the proposal to eliminate mail-in voting and make in-person voting the only option. Mail-in ballots are a secure and convenient way for citizens to participate in elections, especially those with work commitments, mobility issues, or health concerns. Restricting voting to in-person only would unfairly disenfranchise these individuals and increase overcrowding at polling locations, making voting more difficult for everyone.

Mail-in voting has proven to be both secure and reliable, with robust verification processes like signature matching and ballot tracking. Additionally, there is no evidence that mail ballots increase electoral fraud. Instead of eliminating a trusted voting method, let's continue to support and improve it to ensure accessible and efficient elections for all. I urge you to vote against any proposal that removes mail-in voting.
